About Compassion International

Ronald was abandoned as a toddler. From an early age, he knew that his father abandoned his mother when he was pregnant. Then when Ronald's young mother remarried, she abandoned her son to please her new husband.

Ronald certainly wasn't the only child growing up without parents in his neighborhood — or even his own home. Sadly, in his home country, abandonment is not rare. Officials estimate that in Bolivia an infant is abandoned every day.

Grandparents like Ronald's are left raising young children that they physically and financially cannot provide for. In the two small rooms that make up Ronald's home, his grandparents care for three grandchildren in addition to their two teenage children who still live at home.

Ronald knows the love of Christ because of the Un-sponsored Children's Fund.

Must I hold and practice specific Christian beliefs to sponsor a child through Compassion?

Compassion does not set criteria for child sponsorship. We do not require you to sign a statement of faith or a statement regarding your religious beliefs and practices. We do, however, seek sponsors who are aligned with our ministry approach and philosophy. Compassion is an evangelical Christian ministry dedicated to the holistic development of children in poverty. We carry out our programs by partnering with local Christian churches around the world who share our vision for ministry and conduct Christian outreach to local children and families. The partnerships we enter into with these local churches are based upon a universal statement of faith developed by the National Association of Evangelicals.
